

Christopher Peckham

17 hrs

In response to a Facebook post stating that Ive claimed bankruptcy twice, it is 100% factual. If faced with the situations Ive taken on, Id do it again.

I'll try to keep this brief and within a "nutshell" and I'm only explaining this in the best interest of my supporters and most certainly not in the interest of those that want to do nothing but smear my name and that of my family.

In 2008 I divorced my ex wife. I signed a divorce decree that ordered me to take on the debt obtained within my marriage. My ex wife was a stay at home mom and I didn't want to leave her with monetary burden knowing she'd be raising my two children. So therefore, I took on the debt along with paying child support.

My second bankruptcy was similar but my little ones mom was working and I took my own debt with me. But I then again added to my child support.... I never once have complained about my child support knowing that it was in the best interest for me to "eat the debt and move on" than to burden their moms and their wellbeing.

In the last 5 years since my bankruptcy, Ive not only paid child support, but also half of everything they do. Sports, camps, private school for Melanie. Everyone that knows me knows that I have Melanie almost everyday of the week and my older two on the weekends.... This in itself is expensive, but Im proud to be their Dad.... I'd have it no other way.

Their Moms are great mothers and have moved on to be successful. They've co-parented with me to better the future of my children. There's no monetary number, or bankruptcy that will stop me from bettering the lives of my kids... Their best interest will always be my priority and nothing will ever change that. Thank you for the person that posted this for showing my ability to be a Father, since Id never "toot my own horn", you just happened to give me the Segway to do so... For that I thank you!!!!

28

64 Comments